“ Aunt Betty was a very caring woman she showed kindness to anyone she met including animals and plants. One of my favorite memories was on a gray miserable day when nothing I did turned out like I had planned. I left work and went to pick up Billy and Dusty Aunt Betty kept them while I was at work. She met me at the door with a smile I went in and it was so warm and cozy the boys were asleep her kids were at school. She said you want some peanut butter fudge? So there I sat with her at her kitchen table eating fudge and feeling so loved she knew how to make a gray day bright. Before Daddy died we had been trying to get him to eat something without success- Uncle bill walks in with baked sweet taters still warm that Aunt Betty had sent- I mashed one up with butter and he ate almost all of it- that turned out to be the last thing he ate but he enjoyed every bite. Uncle Bill came almost everyday for the four months Daddy was home with Hospice and he always brought a little something from Betty- she was loved and she will be missed.
