“ We have so many memories of Aaron at Grandmama and Granddaddy Creason's house. He was always full of life and never left us guessing very often what he was thinking about. He almost always had a smile. He loved best to be busy. He liked to help. He would share anything he had. One day, Aaron brought his granddaddy his piggy bank; he announced that since Granddaddy was retired he just might be running short on cash. That story gave Daddy a special twinkle in his eye each time he told it. We all still laugh at some of the funny things he said when he was a little fellow. His family here will surely miss him each moment of every day. I'm so sorry for the very great loss. However, I sure am glad that Grandmama and Granddaddy can be with him again.
