“ I just found Chris's obituary, and I am saddened; but underneath the sadness is a memory of laughter. There are people whose lives are tied forever with our memories of a time and place. I picture high school, and Chris is always there, and always will be. In those memories, he is always laughing, and so is everyone around him. How many people must remember Chris, remember his laughter, and remember how he made them laugh! The memory may be tinged with sadness, but I'll bet it brings with it a smile. Maybe a chuckle. Maybe even a laugh. Laughter. What finer legacy could anyone leave for others? Thank you, Chris.

“ I just visited with Chris at his shop a few weeks ago. After our customary exchange of “insults” about each other’s mechanic skills, we chatted for a few minutes like we had just seen each other the previous day. Chris was always in good spirits and could always make me laugh. He was busy as usual working on a vehicle and I had to get back to my job as well, and we hugged (which I don’t believe we’d ever done) and I told him that he’d been on my mind lately and I just felt compelled to stop and check in on him and say hello. If I had known it would be the last time I’d see him on this earth I would have stayed longer, but we just never know about things like that. I know in my heart that I’ll see him again though. One of my most favorite memories is riding with him in his Camaro down Friendship Church Road and yes, we were going quite fast! My thoughts and prayers are with Ms. Betty & Max and all of Chris’ family and friends. RIP Chris!
