“ Before my mother got sick, Helen would call the house. She would want to talk to mother ,but she would say I want to talk to you first. We would always talk for a while and then tell me that she loved me and my husband so much. She then would say she was ready to talk to my mother. I loved her and always told her so. I didn't get to visit her like I wanted to, but I know she would understand. Love to you all

“ I remember Helen from the time I was a very young child. We were cousins but more than that we were neighbors. We all lived in rural Madison County and the only people we saw (except at church on Sunday) were people who lived in our neighborhood close enough for us to walk to visit each other. (Although both families had a car, it was during the war years and gas was rationed--so gas was only used to transport people to work and for emergencies.) Every Saturday evening our whole family would walk to spend several hours visiting Helen's family or her family would walk to our house to visit our family. It was a very fun time. And through the years I always enjoyed visiting with Helen. I know you have very special memories and they will bring peace and joy to you. Hazel Royston David
