“ Ronnie and Carol have been dear friends to our family for many years. Ronnie and my husband, Ricky, shared many good times, including a long fishing trip to Alaska to visit Ricky's brother who was also a close friend of Ronnie's.

Ronnie was always a quiet and easy going man, but after Carol died, we could sense an emptiness in him. He would often come and sit on our back deck with Ricky, the two of them casually discussing everyday topics like the weather and politics, but mostly going over memories they shared through the years. Ronnie was here for one of his welcome visits on Sunday, just two days before he quietly left on his journey to heaven. We didn't know, when we waved goodbye as he was leaving Sunday, that would be the last time we saw our friend here in this world. We will miss him very much.

“ Ronnie was my land lord for the last 5 years. He really won my heart and I am lucky I got to know him. A year or so ago when his wife was sick he held hands in my back yard with my daughters and me as we prayed for her health. And just two weeks ago he met my mother and he told her that he thought the world of me. And last week he came to tell me that he really enjoyed the BBQ I had sent home with him that day. That was our last chat and I will always feel thankful that I got to know Mr. Ronnie.
